WILD? public art residency, project

December 9th - May 11th, 2024

Created by the program's fall artist in residence, LA based environmental artist, Dodd Holsapple, these four totem styled vertical sculptures are inspired by Water, Plants, Birds and Insects present in the Marsh ecosystem.

The project was created during a month long residency at Madrona Marsh Preserve and Nature Center, during which the artist interacted with the preserve and the environmental issues encapsulated at the site, while creating a site-specific body of environmental artwork.

WILD? is an ongoing collaborative public art residency project, between Torrance Art Museum and Madrona Marsh Preserve and Nature Center
